

6236 EMRT report for Mica and Cobalt

The EMRT (Extended Minerals Reporting Template) was created by the RBA (Responsible Business Alliance). Unlike the CMRT, which is linked to the Dodd-Frank Act, there are currently no legal requirements for the EMRT. In general, conflict minerals are raw materials or natural resources that are often mined or extracted illegally and without government control in conflict regions and high-risk areas. Systematic violations of human rights and international law go hand in hand with this. This means EMRT reporting is a corporate social responsibility (CSR) and corporate due diligence issue.

Learning objectives

You will learn background information and details about the objectives of EMRT reporting and will find out the differences between the RMI's CMRT and the EMRT templates. You will gain an understanding of how your supply chain is affected and which documentation and information sharing requirements you and your suppliers need to meet. This will enable you to perform a risk assessment on your supply chain and understand how to use the information received from suppliers for your own reporting. In addition, you will be able to identify the substances of concern as well as generate and provide reporting to your customers using the EMRT template. Finally, you will be able to assess whether your company is affected and understand common due diligence routines.

Course content

- ❑ Overview of EMRT reporting
 - Definition, background, and goals
 - Difference between CMRT and EMRT
 - Definition of required measures for supply chain reporting (OECD Due Diligence Guidance)
- ❑ Impact on the supply chain
 - Assessment of the supply chain from smelter to producer
 - Information transfer and supplier obligations
 - Supply chain risk assessment
- ❑ Preparation of the EMRT
 - Getting to know the current definitions in the EMRT
 - Reporting your company and contact person
 - Selecting the reporting level
 - Answering questions 1–7 on the selected reporting level
 - Answering questions A–G at company level
 - Introduction and evaluation of audit routines (due diligence)

Webinar format

Presentation on creating and sending EMRT reports, taking into account the latest customer-specific requirements

Participants

Users at administrative level, plus quality, environmental management, and purchasing staff

Prerequisites

You should have a basic understanding of conflict minerals, or you will have already completed a relevant training course with us.

Duration:

120 minutes

Max. number of participants: 14

Certificate

As a participant on our training course, you will receive a certificate to verify your qualification.

Course materials

You will receive your own copy of the in-class presentation as a PDF.

Public training courses

Current prices and dates can be found on our website www.imds-professional.com.

Exclusive training courses

You can also book this webinar exclusively for your business. The benefit of this is that it enables you to determine the location, date, and number of participants. If you wish, we can take care of the entire organization of the webinar on your behalf.

To request a tailored quotation, please contact:

Phone +49 6083 91 30 30
info@imds-professional.com